The Bright Shiny Penny

My father told the story of the bright, shiny penny. When he was younger he would attend St. Joseph's Roman Catholic Church, in Rosebank, with his brother Al and sister Adelaide. Each Sunday each of them would be given a dime to put in the collection plate. The Building Fund was for the new church, a brick building, which now stands across the street from the old church. He said that each dime counted for one brick. With all of the dimes they had contributed, he thought that the three of them had bought at least one wall, each, of the new building.

One Sunday, my father was, perhaps, ten or so years old, the three children set off to church and took their places in a pew near the front of the church. When the time for the offering came, the collection plate was passed first to Adelaide. She added her offering and handed it to Al. He looked at it and hesitated. Then, very ceremoniously, making sure that my father could see, he placed his dime next to the lone object in the collection plate, a bright, shiny penny. Dad, taking careful note of contents, placed his dime next to the other two coins and hesitated. He passed the plate along as he and Al began to giggle. The giggling became worse and each of them buried his head in his hat, (hats were a part of dressing up.) The giggling became uncontrollable and, with their faces buried in their hats, they ran out the back of the church. Most everyone in the congregation asked, after church, how those Elwell boys had become so ill that they had to leave the church.

This may not seem so remarkable a story except that the three participants agreed that an incident occurred, but, while Frank and Al maintained that the account I have related was as I have told it, Aunt Adelaide swore that the penny was there when she had gotten the plate and she had placed her dime in with it. Each of the participants remained adamant and now are gone. We will never know what happened that Sunday back in the twenties.

The Chauffeur

My father learned to drive before he was fourteen. This was considerably less than the legal age to drive. There are several stories which involved driving, one when he was fourteen. His brother Vincent, the oldest, had begun on his career on Wall Street. He took the Staten Island Ferry to Manhattan and could have taken the trolley, which ran down Bay Street, to get to and from the ferry. My father could drive, however, and was taken up on his offer to pick his big brother up in the evening in the Phaeton. So, in the evening, dad would get into the car and drive down to the ferry. Every so often, when he got to St. George, he would get flagged down and pulled over by a policeman in front of the Post Office. He would get a lecture about the illegality and danger of driving without a license, handed a traffic ticket and sent on his way. When the ferry arrived and Vincent got into the car, dad would hand the ticket to his brother. On his way home, Uncle Vince slowed the car at the Post Office and handed the ticket back to the policeman . . . folded, with a five dollar bill inside. At Christmas Uncle Vince would offer the guardian of the law by the Post Office a bottle of whisky.
